As I said above, Miss Earth is the world's third largest beauty pageant after Miss Universe and Miss World. Over 80 countries around the world have national competitions and send their finalists to the international pageant which, this year, will be held in Chile. More than 60 million television viewers are expected to watch the international pageant.

The Australian organiser, Maria James, has launched a search for Miss Earth Australia 2006. The winner will represent our country in the world final in Santiago, Chile, this November.

The quest is designed to promote the conservation of our environment and the protection of Mother Earth. Candidates have to show an understanding of environmental issues and a commitment to the preservation of the world's environment. Ms James said. "This beauty contest is a vehicle to attract the community's attention about deteriorating conditions in the world's environment."

Candidates will come from around Australia for the national pageant. Miss Earth Australia 2006 will be named in a lavish Australian pageant at The Enmore Theatre on Wednesday 20 September.

The Australian winner will travel to Chile where she will take part in outdoor and indoor activities such as tree planting, cleaning up beaches, visiting children of poor families, and publicising environmental issues.

The international organisers Carousel Inc stipulates that a candidate must be familiar with environmental issues, aged between 18 to 24, at least 5ft 6in tall, single and never married, a high school graduate, of a pleasing personality, good moral character, and have an attractive face and figure. The competitions are a mix of environmental issues, beauty and glamour.

Miss Earth International Quest was conceived and founded in Manila, Philippines, by Carousel Productions headed by its President, Ramon Monzon, in 2001.

Maria James of Sydney, is the official organiser of Miss Earth Australia beauty pageant. There are 80 chapters worldwide of international beauty quests seeking young women as ambassadors to promote the conservation of the earth's natural environment.

We are hoping that the media and the public will support this cause and the candidates. Everyone likes to have fun and fun we will have at The Enmore Theatre on Wednesday 20 September. The candidates will put on a wonderful and exciting show with great music, brilliant choreography and an entertaining evening. They will be dressed in beautiful gowns and swim suits. Come along and have a great time. The world needs all of the support it can get.

Regards,
Maria James
